

Directions for the I Have Game

This is a great game to use as a review. If you can, print one set of the cards on oak tag or card stock. If not, print out a set on paper, but for durability, glue onto index cards. Cut the cards up and shuffle.

The cards are set up in a sequence where a student asks a question and then another student will have the answer on his/her card. Then that student asks the question on his/her card and another student will have the answer. Eventually, the game should end up back to the first student who answers the last question. There is no card that is the number one card. Any card can be the first card to start the game.

To start, randomly pass out the cards to the students. Randomly pick someone to start the game, reminding them to start with the question and not the answer. The first time going around, it takes a while and really listen that the correct answer is given for the question. If no one comes up with the answer, have students check their neighbor's card to help find the answer. Each time you play the game, the kids get faster. Sometime, challenge them to see how fast they can play the game.
